Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT handle the paramount recovery of corporate information assets following a disaster. These assets may take multiple digital and paper forms. We are trained to work with discretion for small or large projects and keep you compliant with current laws and regulations that may affect your industry. Our freeze-dry chamber also features the quickest processing time to remove water/excess moisture from papers and collections.

MEDIA RECOVERY

Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT provide recovery services for X-rays, microfilm and microfiche. Additionally, we routinely handle damaged photographic media, multiple forms of tape media, audio, disks and optical media that have been affected by water, smoke and other contamination. All of these media respond well to the sublimation freeze-drying process when wet.

INFORMATION SECURITY

With laws such as HIPAA and the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, the proper security and maintenance of business information is critical and a legal priority. Throughout the information recovery process, Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT take extra measures to provide thorough security.

GOVERNMENT RECORDS

Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT often work on high security and classified information recovery projects and offer sound recovery solutions within these constraints. We consider and address the need of government agencies to protect their information while still meeting the expectations of their constituencies.

SPECIAL COLLECTIONS, LIBRARIES AND MUSEUMS

Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT have worked with libraries as well as numerous art, historical, scientific and industrial museums on recovery projects. We've intricately handled artworks, archival materials, biological specimens and three-dimensional items. We also routinely encounter various forms of film media, electronic data and associated equipment and internet hubs. Blackmon Mooring and BMS CAT strive to develop protocols and options that meet the specialized needs of every client.
